تَنْوِين

One stroke is a reading. Two is a record.

One stroke above a letter is a vowel — one judge's reading. Two is a tanwīn, a different thing entirely. A single mark is an opinion; the mark that is witnessed, logged and open to appeal is a judgment. The name already contains the idea.

This manual describes what the application already does. Where a rule here and the code disagree, the code is the fact and this document is the bug.

The mark

One stroke above a letter is a vowel. Two is a tanwīn — a different reading entirely.

A single mark is one judge's opinion. The mark that is logged, attributed and open to appeal is a judgment. The name carries that difference and so does the drawing.

The mark is the fathātān set on its letter-line: two nib-cut pen-strokes at one 40° angle, brought almost to touching so the silhouette reads as one shape.

NEVER REDRAW IT

Use the supplied artwork. The strokes are cut to a single angle and the letter-line is flush left with them; redrawing by eye loses both.

Construction

Both pen-strokes are cut at 40° — one angle, used twice. The nib cut on each end is the same shear, so every edge in the mark belongs to one pen.

The second stroke is offset 14 units right and 8 down. That gap is the tightest the pair can sit without merging into a wedge.

The letter-line is squared off — no shear — and runs flush left with the lower stroke. It is heavier than the strokes because in the mushaf the letter is heavier than the mark on it.

DO NOT ADJUST

Angle, offset and weight are fixed. Nothing here is a preference.

Clear space

Clear space is measured in a — the height of the letter-line, the heaviest element in the mark.

Leave one a free on all four sides. Nothing enters that space: no rule, no caption, no second mark, no edge of a photograph.

WHY THIS UNIT

The letter-line is the only part of the mark whose height never changes relative to the whole. Measuring from it means clear space scales exactly with the mark, at any size, without a second table.

MINIMUM SIZE

16 px for the mark alone. 120 px wide for the full lockup. Below these the letter-line closes up and the two strokes merge.

ARTWORK

The supplied SVG is trimmed to the mark exactly — no padding inside the file. Clear space is added in layout, never baked in.

a = the height of the letter-line

Lockups

Six lockups. Nothing else is the logo.

The horizontal lockup is the default and covers most situations. The stacked form is for square spaces and avatars. The Arabic lockup is for material produced for a Maldivian audience.

Use the mark alone only where the name is already present. Use the name alone only where the mark is already present.

Backgrounds

The mark is ink on paper, or paper on ink. It takes no other colour.

On any light ground use ink. On any dark ground use paper — never pure white; the system stays warm at both ends.

NEVER

The mark never sits on a category colour. Those four tell a judge something specific, and a logo wearing one says something untrue.

PHOTOGRAPHS

Incorrect uses

The mark is a written form. Distorting it is the same as distorting a letter — and this is an application built to catch exactly that.

The eight cases opposite are the ones that actually occur. If a situation is not covered here, use the mark as drawn.

Correct. Mark and name on one baseline, ink on paper.

Never stretch or condense.

Never rotate. The mark rests on its letter-line.

Never add a shadow or any effect.

Never in a category colour. Those four belong to the judging.

Never respace the name.

Never mirror the mark.

Never box the mark. It is drawn to stand free.

Colour

Four criteria, four colours. They are the only saturated things a judge ever sees, and each one carries a meaning a judge acts on.

Because of that they never appear as decoration — not in the logo, not on a certificate, not in marketing. There is no brand accent colour.

THE TALLY

The one exception is the tally: a row of the four, sized to real counts from a real sheet. It is data, not ornament, and it may appear wherever a result appears.

Order is fixed — Jalī, Khafī, Faṣāḥa, Adu — and never re-sorted by size.

ONE KNOWN EXCEPTION IN CODE

--ring is Faṣāḥa blue at 35%, used as the focus ring across thirteen rules. It predates this document and is a system colour, not a verdict.

THE TALLY — THE ONLY PLACE THE FOUR APPEAR TOGETHER

	2 Jalī · 1 Khafī · 1 Faṣāḥa · ½ Adu — 6.5 deducted
	A tally with no data behind it is decoration. Do not draw one.

Dark

The app ships a full dark theme — its own token set, not an inversion. Forty-four rules redeclare colour under [data-theme="dark"].

The mark carries #f2f1ee on dark, never pure white. The system stays warm at both ends.

CONTRAST IS A RULE, NOT A PREFERENCE

--ink-3 is #8b8b95 in dark and #6a6a73 in light. Both were raised from earlier values that measured under 3.5:1. Secondary text carries too much of this app to sit below AA.

THE MUSHAF CHANGES WITH IT

--mushaf-ink becomes #eae7de on a #211f1c page — warm paper, warm ink, inverted but not bleached.

Typography

Two families. InterVar carries the whole interface. KFGQPC Hafs 1405 carries the Qur'an and nothing else — it is never substituted, at any size, in any medium.

SIX SIZES, WHOLE PIXELS

The scale replaced half-pixel sizes that came from nudging individual screens until they looked right, which is why no two of them agreed. 12 is the floor anywhere. Anything a judge reads mid-recitation starts at 14.

NO THIRD FAMILY

The manual is set in InterVar too. A display face was considered and dropped: it would have been a third font shipped to an application that runs offline in competition halls, bought for one word.

KFGQPC HAFS 1405 — QUR'AN ONLY

ذٰلِكَ الْكِتٰبُ لَا رَيْبَ فِيْهِ هُدًى لِّلْمُتَّقِيْنَ

The tally

One row of four squares. Each square is a criterion; its width is how many marks of that kind the judges gave. It is a picture of a score.

HOW IT IS BUILT

52 px per mark. Two Jalī marks make 104 px, one Khafī makes 52, half an Adu makes 26. Height is always 30 px, the gap always 5.

Order is fixed — Jalī, Khafī, Faṣāḥa, Adu — and never re-sorted by size.

WHERE IT GOES

Beside any result: record sheet, certificate, results board, the app's score panel.

THE RULE THAT KEEPS IT HONEST

Four equal squares with no sheet behind them is decoration wearing the judging colours. If there is no score, do not draw one.

In the app

The header carries the mark at 22 px beside the name at 15 px, weight 500 — the same size and weight as every other label in the interface. The brand does not shout inside the product.

COLOUR ON THE PAGE

A held word stays neutral. Holding is not yet a verdict, and colour on the page belongs to the criteria alone.

STATE IS CARRIED TWICE

Every mark carries its criterion in the word as well as the colour, so a record survives a colour-blind reader and a washed-out projector alike.

The record

Every line is a mark placed on a letter, signed by the judge who placed it. A contestant may query any single row without reopening the rest of the score.

That is the whole argument of the product, so the record sheet is the one piece of print that must never be simplified for looks.

REQUIRED ON EVERY SHEET

Sheet number and date. Contestant, category and passage. Every mark with its āyah, word, criterion, judge and amount. The arithmetic shown, not just the total. Both judges named.

Accreditation and print

Two printed things carry the mark in public: the badge a judge wears, and the certificate a contestant takes home.

BADGE

Mark and name at the top, role in 27 px, the person's name below it, panel and competition at the foot. Ink on paper for judges; paper on ink for stewards, so the two read apart across a hall.

CERTIFICATE

The tally sits under the placement. A certificate that shows only a number says less than one that shows what the number was made of.

Signage

At hall scale the mark is used alone or with the name, in ink on paper or paper on ink, and nothing else.

MINIMUM ACROSS A HALL

Set the letter-line no thinner than 20 mm at three metres. Below that the two strokes close up and the mark reads as one slab.

WAYFINDING

Hall letters are set in the Arabic abjad — أ ب ج د — matching the signage a Maldivian competition already uses. The mark appears once per sign, at the top left.
